The Relation of Music with Literature and History and the Need of Music in Classroom

Shri. S.M. Nandagawali

Abstract

The most particular relationship between music and literature is the musicality of the human voice in word and in song. Music is found in every known culture, past and present, varying wildly between times and places. Since all people of the world, including the most isolated tribal groups, have a form of music. Music allows us to combine the reading of culture with literary reading what is involved in the formation of a specifically literary language. Literature can move world. Music class is important because, society believes that the education you receive is important as it becomes part of a human's soul. According to many studies, the human mind is able to collect endless knowledge. For centuries, music has been a determining factor in the shaping of our literary landscape. It has been widely recognized that music and poetry sprang from the common origin of chant or incantation.
