The Importance of Music in Our Society

Shri Mangesh G. Wahane

Abstract

It is said that the origin of this universe is from the sound, wherever there is sound there is a music. Music is the basic and fundamental part of this universal element. Many disease can be cured by using the sound therapy. Each and every element or things on this universe is creating some sound, even though we can't hear that sounds. Music has the power to change your thoughts and emotions. That's why it is said music is the medicine of Mind.

Keywords : Sound. Music. Universal, society, mind, disease, classical music, modern music,

Introduction

Art and music are basic human functions. Humankind and art cannot function without one another. We have the burning desire to create, whatever it may be and however tiny or grand. The interaction with sound is unavoidable, either to make it or take pleasure in it. People have always found music significant in their lives, whether for enjoyment in listening, the emotional response, performing, or creating. This is. Even more, the pretentiousness and elitism that some artists exhibit is amplified by some television shows, commercials, plays, books, by people of influence and even themselves, which distance musicians from mainstream society. While some of this is true, as with nearly any stereotype, it is not
